Tokaji Aszú 6 Puttonyos 2013

Tokaj, Hungary

Region and Vineyards

Oremus Aszú 6 Puttonyos is made in Tokaj, a historic wine region in northeast Hungary famed for its volcanic soils, morning fogs, and cool autumns—ideal for the development of Botrytis cinerea. The Oremus estate spans 91 hectares, situated at 200 metres above sea level, planted at a density of 5,660 vines/ha, with vines averaging 18 years of age.

In 2013, the growing season began with a mild, wet winter that replenished water reserves, followed by a summer of heat interspersed with storms. The cool, sunny autumn provided textbook conditions for noble rot. The harvest was conducted entirely by hand in two to three passes between mid-September and early November, with a yield of only 488 kg/ha (3.4 hl/ha), underscoring the wine's remarkable concentration.

Winemaking

The production of Aszú 6 Puttonyos follows the traditional method. Six 25-kg panniers (puttonyos) of botrytised Aszú berries are added to each 136-litre Gönc barrel of base must. The berries are macerated for two days, gently pressed, and fermented slowly in new Hungarian oak barrels over a period of up to two months.

The wine is then aged for two to three years in small barrels (136 to 200 litres), followed by at least one year in bottle before release. The 2013 vintage was bottled after this process and resulted in the production of 23,500 bottles (50 cl).

Tasting Notes

- Color: Deep amber-gold with luminous brilliance and high viscosity.
- Aroma: Intensely aromatic with dried apricot, candied orange peel, saffron, and honey, lifted by notes of chamomile and exotic spice.
- Palate: Lusciously sweet (174 g/L residual sugar) yet beautifully balanced by vibrant acidity (8.4 g/L). Layers of stone fruits, citrus confit, ginger, and acacia unfold on the palate. The finish is extraordinarily long, harmonious, and refined.

Tokaji Aszú 6 Puttonyos 2013

Did you know?

The 2013 vintage, along with 2008, is considered one of the greatest vintages of the millennium for Tokaji Aszú. The term "6 Puttonyos" represents the highest classic category before entering Essencia-level sweetness, reflecting a style of profound depth and exceptional aging potential. Stored properly, this wine can age gracefully for over 40 years.

Wine Pairing Ideas

- Foie gras with fig compote – a luxurious classic where sweetness and acidity counter the richness.
- Blue cheese platter – the wine's intensity matches strong, salty cheeses like Gorgonzola or Roquefort.
- Duck breast with orange and honey glaze – a savoury pairing echoing the wine's citrus and spice.
- Apricot tart with almond cream – dessert pairing that enhances the wine's stone fruit and nutty undertones.
