

Matias Riccitelli

A rare and refined expression of Argentine Semillón, this 2023 release showcases the nuance, texture, and longevity of old vines from Río Negro.

MATIAS RICCITELLI

Old Vines From Patagonia Semillon 2023

Patagonia, Argentina

Region and Vineyards

This wine comes from Río Negro, a cool-climate region in northern Patagonia, Argentina, located along the 39th parallel south at an altitude of 400 metres. The vineyards are home to over 50-year-old Semillón vines, long neglected but now carefully revived by Matías Riccitelli. The location benefits from intense sunlight during the day and very cold nights, a sharp diurnal range that slows ripening and builds both flavour intensity and acidity retention.

The soils are alluvial, and the climate semi-arid, allowing for sustainable, low-intervention farming. These conditions, combined with vine age and thoughtful viticulture, allow for a distinct expression of Semillón—rich, yet taut; textured, yet focused.

Winemaking

Grapes are hand-harvested into small 20 kg cases at optimal ripeness to preserve fruit integrity. After careful selection, the fruit undergoes a 48-hour cold skin maceration at 10 °C, enhancing phenolic structure and aromatic lift.

Fermentation is split between used French oak barrels (60%) and concrete eggs (40%), carried out at low temperatures (14–16 °C) to preserve freshness. The wine is matured for six months in the same vessels (60% oak, 40% concrete), with no fining and only minimal filtration. This dual-vessel approach contributes to the wine's rich texture and layered complexity, while maintaining its precision and purity.

Tasting Notes

- Color: Pale straw with greenish reflections.
- Aroma: Complex and layered, with lemon peel, orange blossom, pineapple, and vanilla, over subtle nutty and waxy undertones.
- Palate: Elegant and textural, showing bright citrus, white flowers, and hints of almond and lanolin, supported by balanced acidity and a long, savoury finish.

Alcohol :12,50 %

Old Vines From Patagonia Semillon 2023

Did you know?

Semillón was once widely planted in Argentina but fell out of favour for decades. Riccitelli's revival of old vine Semillón in Patagonia is part of a broader movement to rescue heritage varieties and show their capacity for fine, age-worthy wines. Few white wines from Argentina express such quiet confidence, textural complexity, and subtlety.

Wine Pairing Ideas

- Salt-crusted sea bass with fennel – complements the wine's saline edge and floral aromatics.
- Chicken in a white wine and tarragon sauce – echoes the wine's citrus and creamy texture.
- Pasta with lemon, ricotta and almonds – a harmony of brightness and soft nuttiness.
- Aged goat cheese or Comté – the wine's waxy texture and acidity lift savoury depth.

Robert Parker (RP) : 96 Points (2021)

The serious, elegant and impressive white 2021 Old Vines from Patagonia Semillon is the seventh vintage from the same vineyard. It fermented and matured in foudre, fine-tuning viticulture and yields, fermented with some skins. It matured with the lees for some eight months. It has 12.5% alcohol and a lot of acidity but is milder than the wines from La Carrera in Mendoza; they have been adjusting yields and picking date to achieve a fresher and umami white with life and energy and year in bottle. Austere, honed and representing the place it comes from. 3,000 bottles were filled in October 2021.
