Itata Valley, Chile

Region and Vineyards

The Itata Valley, located in southern Chile, is one of the country's oldest wine regions, with vineyards dating back to the 16th century. The grapes for this wine come from the village of Guarilhue, situated 22 kilometers from the Pacific Ocean and characterized by a cool maritime climate.

The vineyard, planted in 1982, is composed of gobelet-trained vines, a traditional technique suited to dry-farmed conditions. The soils are predominantly granite-based, providing excellent drainage and lending the wine its unique minerality. These conditions, combined with the coastal influence, result in grapes with vibrant acidity and concentrated flavors, ideal for crafting expressive and terroir-driven wines.

Winemaking

This wine is a tribute to the winemaking traditions of the Itata Valley, employing centennial tinajas (amphorae), which have been used in the region since the mid-16th century. The grapes are hand-harvested and destemmed, and the whole berries are placed into amphorae, where they undergo a semi-carbonic spontaneous fermentation. This method preserves the bright fruit flavors and delicate aromatics of the Cinsault grape.

After fermentation, the wine is left to mature in amphorae through the winter. The free-run and press wines are blended, and the wine completes malolactic fermentation during the spring before being bottled. This minimal-intervention approach enhances the wine's purity and connection to its historic roots.

Tasting Notes

- Color: Bright ruby red with medium intensity.
- Aroma: High-toned and perfumed, with notes of red berries, citrus peel, and violets, complemented by smoky granite undertones.
- Palate: Light-bodied with a lean structure and a core of intense red fruit. Fine-grained tannins and crisp acidity provide balance, while the granite-derived minerality adds depth and complexity. The finish is long and lingering, with a touch of savory earthiness.

Did You Know?

The use of amphorae for fermentation and aging in this wine reflects a technique that dates back to the earliest winemaking in Chile, starting in 1551. These traditional vessels, made of terracotta, allow gentle oxygenation, enhancing the wine's purity and preserving its vibrant fruit character.

Wine Pairing Ideas

- Charcuterie boards with cured meats and hard cheeses: The wine's acidity and fruit-forward profile cut through the richness of the meats and complement the savory notes of the cheese.
- Grilled lamb chops with herbs: The minerality and fine tannins balance the earthy flavors of lamb and fresh herbs.
- Vegetable ratatouille: Its bright red fruit and floral notes harmonize with the dish's sweet and savory Mediterranean flavors.
- Seared tuna with citrus glaze: The citrus peel aromatics and crisp acidity pair beautifully with the delicate richness of tuna.

Robert Parker (RP) : 92 Points (2020)

The 2020 Viejas Tinajas Cinsault was produced with grapes from 35-year-old, ungrafted and dry-farmed vines in Guarilhue in Coelemu. It's from a warmer year and has higher ripeness than in past years, 13% alcohol and mellow acidity. Like in the past, the destemmed but uncrushed grapes underwent a natural carbonic maceration in amphorae without any added products (yeasts or sulfur). The wine spent the winter in those amphorae, and after malolactic, in the spring, it was bottled unfiltered with a little sulfur. The nose mixes wild berries and herbs and is very expressive, and the palate is medium-bodied and balanced with fine-grained tannins and a tasty finish.

Robert Parker (RP) : 94 Points (2018)

Sourced from dry-farmed vines planted in Guariligüe 33 years ago, the uncrushed grapes ferment in a carbonic maceration way in the terracotta amphorae for 15 days; the wine is kept in the amphorae through the winter and then is bottled unfiltered once malolactic fermentation has completed. This was not bottled in 2017, as the wine was strongly marked by the smoke from the fires that happened that year. The old amphorae seem to be more neutral after a few years, and the wines are not marked like they were in 2011. This is precise, expressive and fresh, with a wild character, very different from the other Cinsaults. It has a brothy, meaty touch on the palate that makes it very tasty. Clean and precise, with very good grip, 2018 has to be the finest vintage to date for this wine. (LG) (10/2018)

Wines & Spirits (W&S) : 95 Points (2016)

Fermented and aged in clay amphorae, this cinsault comes from the top of a hill in Guariligüe, near the Itata coast. Winemaker Marcelo Retamal has been playing with early harvests in search of redder fruit flavor and greater tension in this wine and, in the cool 2016 season, he achieved his goal. This is serious cinsault, its tea-leaf and earth aromas finely integrated into a layer of tart red fruit. While that fruit is crisp and vibrant, the depths of flavor are profound. All in all, it's a pleasure to drink, refreshing and charming.
