Region and Vineyards

The Central Coast of California is a renowned wine-growing region known for its ideal climate and diverse terroir. Calera's vineyards are located in the Gavilan Mountains, where cool maritime influences and limestone-rich soils create perfect conditions for growing Pinot Noir. Since Josh Jensen founded Calera in 1975, this area has become one of the New World's most exciting regions for Pinot Noir.

The growing season was marked by below-average rainfall in the winter, followed by moderate spring temperatures that resulted in varied budbreak across the region. The temperate weather continued into the early summer, providing ample hangtime for the grapes. This long growing season culminated in one of the latest harvests on record for the Central Coast, leading to wines with excellent balance, lively acidity, and sophisticated flavors.

Winemaking

The Calera Central Coast Pinot Noir is made from 100% Pinot Noir grapes sourced from some of the finest vineyards in the region. The wine was aged for 10 months in French oak barrels, with 10% new oak to add complexity and 90% neutral oak to preserve the purity of the fruit. This careful aging process helped to enhance the wine's structure and complexity without overpowering its delicate fruit and spice notes.

The winemaking team aimed to preserve the varietal's vibrant character while delivering a balanced wine with supple tannins and a long finish. The result is a beautifully textured Pinot Noir that showcases the elegance and potential of the Central Coast.

Did you know?

Calera's name means "lime kiln" in Spanish, a nod to the limestone-rich soils found in the Gavilan Mountains. Founder Josh Jensen was inspired by the limestone soils of Burgundy, and he selected this site specifically for its ability to produce elegant and structured wines, especially Pinot Noir, that can stand alongside the world's best.
