Region and Vineyards

The Robola of Kefalonia hails from the picturesque island of Kefalonia in the Ionian Sea, renowned for its limestone-rich soils and mountainous terrain. The vineyards are situated at elevations ranging from 500 to 800 meters, where the combination of altitude and calcareous soils imparts a distinctive minerality and crisp acidity to the Robola grapes. The island's Mediterranean climate, characterized by ample sunshine and cooling sea breezes, further enhances the aromatic profile and balance of the wine.

Winemaking

This vintage is produced exclusively from 100% Robola grapes, meticulously hand-harvested to ensure optimal ripeness. Fermentation occurs in temperature-controlled stainless steel tanks, preserving the varietal's fresh and delicate aromatics. The wine is then aged on fine lees for several months, enhancing its texture and complexity. No oak influence is introduced, allowing the pure expression of the Robola grape and its terroir to shine through.
