Farrside Geelong Pinot Noir 2021

Victoria, Australia

Region and Vineyards

The Geelong wine region in Victoria, Australia, is situated approximately 80 kilometers southwest of Melbourne. Known for its cool maritime climate, the region provides ideal conditions for growing Pinot Noir. The Farrside vineyard lies on the most northerly side of the By Farr estate, featuring black volcanic soil over limestone, which contributes to the wine's distinct minerality and structure.

The vineyard employs sustainable and organic practices, including cover cropping, mulching, and organic sprays, to maintain vine health and soil quality. The vines are a mix of 114, 115, 777, 667, and MV6 clones, planted with east-to-west orientation to minimize overexposure to sunlight. This combination of clones and the vineyard's cooler growing conditions leads to a wine that is both edgy and complex, with darker soils imparting additional depth and richness.

Winemaking

The 2021 vintage presented challenges with persistent rain and humidity, but rigorous vineyard management ensured the fruit reached full potential. The grapes were handpicked and sorted directly in the vineyard to select only the finest fruit. Approximately 50% of the grapes were destemmed, and the remainder underwent a four-day cold soak to enhance flavor extraction.

Fermentation took place in open-top stainless steel vats using natural yeasts, lasting 12 days. Pigeage (manual punching down) was performed two to three times a day to control the level of extraction. The wine was then transferred by gravity into 50% new Allier Damy oak barrels, where it underwent malolactic fermentation and aged for 18 months. It was racked twice, once after malolactic fermentation and again before bottling, to ensure clarity and balance.

Decanter (DCT) : 92 Points (2021)

Beautiful nose, alluring perfume of fruits, florals and integrated oak, ripe forest fruits, roses and a pinch of spice. The palate is plush, sweet, caressing, citrus peel freshness. Good concentration of fruit and incisive savoury complexity. Harmoniously balanced.

Robert Parker (RP) : 94 Points (2018)

The medium-ruby 2018 Farrside Pinot Noir is just another exhibit in the case that color intensity and flavor intensity—particularly in Pinot Noir—have little to do with one another. The wine features complex aromas of black tea, roses, grilled plums and fresh raspberries, and those notes are repeated on the medium-bodied palate. There's a bit more expansiveness to this wine compared to the Sangreal, and the tannins are even silkier here, but quality-wise the two wines are basically equivalent.

James Suckling (JS) : 93 Points (2016)

This delivers a very complex, rather full, ripe and dense pinot with a savory nose, delivering aromas of spiced earth, forest berries and dried red plums. The palate has plenty of power, muscular dark cherries and red plums, which are framed in bold, sinewy tannins. Try this in a few years. Best from 2022.
